“Increasing Knowledge Together for a Better Tomorrow”

Volume 3 - Issue 10 July 2011

The Gitselasu Dance Group performing at the Aboriginal Day Celebrations in George Little Park June 25th 2011.

Despite the overcast, rain did not fall to dampen the spirit of the National Aboriginal Day Celebrations held in George Little Park. The annual event brings together Native people from the many outlying communities for a day of unity in celebration of our rich heritage and culture. The park was bustling as visitors moved amongst the various vendors and information booths with the neighbouring Farmer's Market adding to the energy that fed the day. BBQ salmon, fried bread and “Indian ice cream” (soap berries) were among some of the delicious foods available for sale. The crowd was treated to traditional dancing from a number of different groups in addition to band performances and speakers throughout the day. At one point we were also blessed with eagles flying overhead. It was a great day to be Aboriginal!

Please, Be 'Bear Aware'!

Information taken from the Ministry of Environment website

People teach bears bad habits. If bears are allowed to access human food and garbage, they quickly learn to associate it with people and become what is called food-conditioned. These bears lose their fear of humans and become habituated to people.

Habituated and food-conditioned bears are more difficult to drive away than wild bears. If a bear develops a taste for human food, it usually keeps coming back for more. Wild bears can become permanently food-conditioned after only one encounter with non-natural food.

Food-conditioned bears learn to expect human food and are more likely to approach people than wild bears. These bears can damage your property and they are a potential risk to you and the safety of your family. In most cases, however, when a bear comes into conflict with people, it's the bear that loses.

You can help keep bears away from your home by removing any bear-attracting food sources and clearing away any dense brush that could provide cover.

If a bear comes into your backyard try to startle and scare it away by flashing lights and making lots of loud noises. Let the bear know that it is not welcome in your home. However, if the bear is already food-conditioned leave it alone and contact your local Conservation Service Officer (toll free at 1-877-952-7277) for help as these bears can be aggressive.

Bears are lured into peoples' backyards by: household garbage, pet and livestock food, bird feeders, food scraps and smells from uncleaned barbeques, compost bins, orchards, garden produce, etc.

Household garbage is the single biggest killer of bears. During the early spring to late fall, keep garbage behind closed doors in your garage, basement or storage area. Garbage that is left in open carports or in your backyard is an easy target for bears. Put your garbage out on the morning of collection day and not the night before. Avoid stockpiling garbage as this is a good way to attract bears. If you take your garbage to the dump yourself, make sure that it is stored behind closed doors and take it to the dump on a frequent basis. Thoroughly clean your garbage containers every 2-3 days.

Bears have been known to lift barbeques right off porches. During bear season, clean your barbeque immediately after every use. Wash the grill or burn off the smells, food residue and grease. If you can smell your barbeque then it is not clean enough. Store your barbeque in a safe place behind closed doors.

Picking ripe and excess fruit and removing windfall on a regular basis will discourage bears from seeking food. Store your fruit securely behind closed doors. If you have bear problems and do not use your fruit trees, consider removing them.

Use electric fencing to keep bears out of your garden, but make sure that you put it up before bears learn that you have vegetables.

In making a few adjustments to the way we live, we can avoid attracting bears into the community and avoid the tragic loss of more of our bear friends.

This article taken from written material published at http://www.env.gov.bc.ca/cos/info/bearaware/prevent_problems.html

TIP: Freeze fish guts or waste until garbage pick up day. This will avoid creating a tempting meal for a hungry bear.

Can't we just Re-locate the bears?

Translocation is rarely successful because these bears often return to their original home territory or they become "problem" bears in other communities. Translocated bears usually fail to adapt to their new habitat. They often starve to death or are killed by bears that already occupy the territory.

Trapping bears can be difficult because:

- Culvert traps only work when the bear is hungry and there is no other food available for the bear (the success rate is low).
- Snaring is an effective way to trap bears, but it can only be done in remote areas. A highly stressed, snared bear is a serious safety hazard to people.
- Tranquilizers require 6-20 minutes to take effect. During this time, bears can be a serious safety hazard. For this reason, Bears are only drugged when they are caught in a snare or culvert trap or sometimes when they are in a tree.

Once bears learn how to access human food, they'll do almost anything to get it. The best long-term solution to bear is to avoid creating "problem" bears in the first place.

Kitselas held its first community BBQ to commemorate Aboriginal Day on June 21st. Organized by Marcia Spencer, many community volunteers came together to make the event a great success (Thank You everyone for your hard work). In addition to food and good company, youth later entertained the audience with traditional dancing.

Headstart Graduation

Kitselas Headstart celebrated the progression of 12 students into Kindergarten with a graduation ceremony on June 24th 2011. Seven will continue on with the Headstart program in the fall, they too celebrated the years learning accomplishments. A new Language & Development curriculum was also launched at the event. Fundraising efforts for this years celebration were phenomenal and allowed for a special day for the children who were treated to a catered lunch of their favorite foods.

The Kitselas Summer Student program is underway! This summer, students will be working in rotation with the various departments within the Kitselas Administration. As part of their participation in the program, the students have completed the World Host Certificate Program and a Resume Writing Workshop. They will also spend time learning job search techniques, interviewing skills, employer/employee expectations and so forth.
